

General Working Alone Requirements

Most workers work with other workers. But some workers work by alone or in isolation. For example, some may work onsite but at odd hours, such as retail staff working the late shift, security guards or cleaning staff. Others may work offsite or in remote locations, such as salesmen, repairmen, delivery personnel or workers at forestry operations. When alone, workers may be more vulnerable to certain hazards, such as violence, or unable to get help if they get injured or sick. As a result, the OHS laws often impose special requirements for the protection of workers when working alone. Here's a look at the general working alone requirements in each jurisdiction's OHS law. (Note: This chart doesn't include requirements that apply only to certain kinds of workplaces or work, such as late night retail workplaces).

OHS Regs.:

1. Before a worker is assigned to work alone or in isolation, the employer must identify any hazards to that worker [Sec. 4.20.2(1)].
2. Before a worker starts a work assignment with a hazard identified under the above, the employer must take measures:
 - a. to eliminate the hazard; and
 - b. if it isn't practicable to eliminate the hazard, to minimize the risk from the hazard [Sec. 4.20.2(2)].
3. For purposes of the above, the employer must minimize the risk from the hazard to the lowest level practicable using engineering controls, administrative controls or a combination of engineering and administrative controls [Sec. 4.20.2(3)].
4. The employer must develop and implement a written procedure for checking the well-being of a worker assigned to work alone or in isolation [Sec. 4.21(1)].
5. The procedure for checking a worker's well-being must include the time interval between checks and the procedure to follow in case the worker cannot be contacted, including provisions for emergency rescue [Sec. 4.21(2)].
6. A person must be designated to establish contact with the worker at predetermined intervals and the results must be recorded by the person [Sec. 4.21(3)].
7. In addition to checks at regular intervals, a check at the end of the work shift must be done [Sec. 4.21(4)].
8. The procedure for checking a worker's well-being, including time intervals between the checks, must be developed in consultation with the JHSC or worker health and safety representative, as applicable [Sec. 4.21(5)].
9. Time intervals for checking a worker's well-being must be developed in consultation with the worker assigned to work alone or in isolation [Sec. 4.21(6)].
10. A worker working alone or in isolation and any person assigned to check on the worker must be trained in the written procedure for checking the worker's well-being [Sec. 4.22].
11. The procedures referred to in Secs. 4.21 and 4.22.1(2)(a) and, if a violence prevention program is implemented, the procedures, policies and work environment arrangements referred to in section 4.22.1 (2.1), must be reviewed at least annually, or more frequently if there's:
 - a. a change in work environment arrangements that could adversely affect:
 - i. the effectiveness of the violence prevention program, or
 - ii. a worker's well-being or safety; or
 - b. a report that the procedures, policies or work environment arrangements, as applicable, aren't working effectively [Sec. 4.23].
