Company and Manager Face Criminal Negligence Charges in Plant Explosion

An explosion at a plant killed one worker and injured five others. The police investigated the incident with help from the MOL and have charged both the company and one of its managers with one count each of criminal negligence causing death and five counts of criminal negligence causing bodily harm [Veolia Environmental Services and Anthony Lavoratore, The Globe and Mail, Dec. 4, 2015].