

COVID-19 Testing Requirement For Land Entries To Canada

As has almost become a weekly segment for the Moodys Tax blog, the following addresses new COVID-related requirements for entry to Canada.

In a previous blog, we provided guidance on the requirement that all international air passengers traveling to Canada must present a negative COVID-19 molecular polymerase chain reaction (PCR) test result prior to boarding. Yesterday, the Government of Canada announced these same restrictions will now also apply to ports-of-entry via land beginning February 15, 2021.

What type of COVID-19 test must be conducted'

The COVID-19 PCR test, which is also called a "viral test," must be performed. An antibody COVID-19 test will not meet the requirements for entry. The PCR test result must be performed by a lab accredited by a government, professional association, or have obtained International Organization for Standardization (ISO) accreditation.

When must the land traveler's COVID-19 PCR test be conducted'

The COVID-19 PCR test must be conducted within seventy-two (72) hours prior to boarding a flight to Canada. This seventy-two (72) hour requirement is applied rigorously with no grace period.

What is acceptable evidence of a negative COVID-19 PCR test'

The traveler must have written or electronic proof of a negative COVID-19 PCR test conducted within seventy-two (72) hours prior to boarding.

Will proof of receiving a COVID-19 vaccine replace this test requirement'

While this is likely to be true at some point, receipt of the vaccine does not replace the COVID-19 PCR testing requirement.

Which travelers may be exempt from the testing requirement'

- Children under the age of five (5); and
- Emergency service providers.

Does this testing requirement replace other measures implemented by Canada to prevent the spread of COVID-19'

No, for now, this new COVID-19 PCR testing requirement does not replace the following key measures:

- ArriveCAN registration and completion;
- Fourteen (14) day quarantine requirement; and/or
- Alberta Pilot Program.

Moodys Tax Law is only about tax. It is not an add-on service, it is our singular focus. Our Canadian and US lawyers and Chartered Accountants work together to develop effective tax strategies that get results, for individuals and corporate clients with interests in Canada, the US or both. Our strengths lie in Canadian and US cross-border tax advisory services, estate planning, and tax litigation/dispute resolution. We identify areas of risk and opportunity, and create plans that yield the right balance of protection, optimization and compliance for each of our clients' special circumstances.
