

Death of Miner Results in $280,000 Fine

A worker in a mine was killed when he was struck on the head by falling earth. The mining company was fined $280,000 after pleading guilty to failing to take effective steps to control the movement of strata in all underground excavations to protect workers' health and safety [Potash Corporation of Saskatchewan Inc., Govt. News Release, Dec. 9, 2015].