

Emergency Planning & Preparedness

Emergencies may be rare but when they occur, they can be catastrophic. Just look at the recent sawmill explosions and fires in BC and the shopping centre parking garage collapse in Ontario for a few examples. To minimize injuries, fatalities and property damage, it's critical that your company effectively plans for emergencies and how to respond to them by developing and implementing an emergency plan. Here's an overview on the laws that impact emergency planning and response and eight tips for ensuring that your company and its workers are adequately prepared for any emergency.