First Nation Fined $100,000 for Failing to Comply with Environmental Order

The government directed a First Nation to provide an emergency plan and inspection records, and to implement a product transfer area designed to contain spills at a gas station it owned and operated. But the First Nation failed to comply with the environmental compliance order. It pleaded guilty to violating the CEPA 1999 and was fined $100,000 [Kawacatoose First Nation, Govt. News Release, April 29, 2016].