

Lockout Violation Costs Employer $50,000

A worker was testing equipment when it malfunctioned. He tried to fix the problem and accidentally activated the equipment, which resulted in his arm being pinned and injured. The M0L investigation found that the equipment hadn't been checked to find out if it was operational and the electrical source wasn't locked out as required. As a result, the employer pleaded guilty and was fined $50,000 [Bailey Metal Processing Ltd., Govt. News Release, Sept. 15, 2016].