CASES

Environmental: Trucking Company Fined $161,000 for Shorelines Alterations & Permit Violations

A trucking company was fined $161,000 after pleading guilty to altering shorelines and failing to follow permit conditions relating to culvert installations. The case began a year ago when conservation officers in Spiritwood observed significant amounts of soil and debris at a creek flowing directly into Chitek lake. Concerned about potential impacts on water quality and aquatic habitats, officers inspected other work areas along Highway 24 and found similar issues [110186505 Saskatchewan Ltd., operating as Schmidt Trucking, Govt. Press Release, September 30, 2025].
