

Monthly & Regular Workplace Inspections

There's one more compelling reason to carry out regular workplace inspections: the OHS laws require you to.

Conducting regularly scheduled workplace safety inspections is a critical component of an OHS program. The name of the game: Find and eliminate safety hazards before they cause incidents and injuries—and before government

OHS inspectors find them for you. Regular inspection also enables you to verify whether the controls you've put in place to manage the hazards that you've previously identified are working. There's one more compelling reason to carry out regular workplace inspections: the OHS laws require you to. Having and not having a robust OHS inspections policy and program has a direct impact on your company's liability risks.