

OHS Fines Scorecard (April 15 to May 15)

It was a robust month for fine volume with 20 significant reported OHS fines of over $25,000 in Canada in the 4-week period from mid-April to mid-May. That matches the biggest month of 2025 and is well above the monthly average of 13.6 for the year. The total fine amount for the period was $2.918 million, the second highest of the year.

However, fine amounts didn’t keep pace with fine volume. This month’s average fine of $145,900 was just the third highest of the year’s 5 periods and below the average of $171,735 per fine for the entire year. Here are the OHS fine totals for the first 5 months of 2025.

Table 1. OHS Fines in 2025 At A Glance

Period	Total Reported Fines	Reported 6-Figure Fines	Total Fines Value (in millions of dollars)	Average Fine Amount
To mid-Jan	7	1	$0.684	$97,714
Mid-Jan to mid-Feb	20	14	$3.689	$184,450
Mid-Feb to mid-March	9	5	$2.361	$263,300

6-Figure OHS Fines

Only 6 of the 20 reported significant OHS fines during the period totaled $100,000 or more, which is by far the lowest proportion for the year so far. Of the 68 significant fines reported for the year, 31 have been in the 6-figure range. That ratio had been running at or near 50% until this month.

The month featured the fourth and fifth highest OHS fines of the year. Saskatchewan reported the biggest fine of the period—$575,000 against a steel parts manufacturer for a machine guard violation resulting in serious but nonfatal injuries to a maintenance worker. It was the first 6-figure fine to come out of Saskatchewan this year. Alberta handed out its biggest OHS fine of the year, $500,000, against an energy company, in its capacity as prime contractor, for a welding explosion that killed 2 workers. Another company was fined $50,000 for the same incident.

Alberta and Ontario reported the only other 6-figure fines during the period. Not surprisingly, 5 of the month's 6 6-figure fine cases involved at least one fatality. As shown below, Alberta has accounted for 5 of the year's 10 biggest OHS fines, followed by BC with 4 and Saskatchewan with 1. Curiously, Ontario hasn't made the Top 10 list even though it's handed out more fines than any other province.

Alberta has now tied Ontario for most reported 6-figure fines of the year. BC is close behind with 7. Somewhat surprisingly, no other jurisdiction has yet reported a 6-figure OHS fine in 2025.

Overall OHS Fines

After reporting the largest number of significant fines for 2 months in a row, BC fell back to third place this month with only 3 reported. Meanwhile, Ontario which had been in a holding pattern due to provincial elections, began to get its case load caught up with 12 significant fines reported. Alberta reported 4 significant fines during the period. The only other significant fine came from Saskatchewan.

Table 3. OHS Fines Reported April 15, to May 15, 2025* (over $25,000)

Jurisdiction	Fine	Company	What Happened	Violation(s)
SK	$575,000	Evraz Inc. NA Canada	Steel plant worker suffers serious injuries while inspecting the underside of sheet metal as it was being mechanically moved through a metal slitting machine.	Failure to provide an effective safeguard when a worker may contact a dangerous moving part of a machine.
