

Oil Sands Company Charged in Release of Hydrogen Sulphide

An oil sands facility released hydrogen sulphide gas, produced during the bitumen upgrading process. The government charged it with three violations of the Environmental Protection and Enhancement Act for releasing a substance into the environment that caused a significant adverse effect and failing to report the release [Canadian Natural Resources Ltd., Govt. News Release, May 14, 2012].